

Parsley for Dogs

How to use the SAFE variety to fight bad breath naturally.

Know Your Parsley

This is the most important page in this guide. Two parsleys look similar but only one is safe for dogs.

SAFE TO USE

CURLY LEAF PARSLEY

Tightly bunched, ruffled leaves
Bright deep green color
Found in the fresh herbs section
Same parsley used as a garnish
Latin name: Petroselinum crispum

TOXIC, AVOID

SPRING PARSLEY

Flat, fern-like leaves
Pale or yellowish green
Usually grows wild, not in stores
Causes photosensitivity and toxicity
Latin name: Cymopterus watsonii

How Much to Give

Chop fresh curly parsley finely and sprinkle directly onto your dog's food. Use only the leaves, not the tough stems.

Your Dog's Weight	Fresh Chopped Parsley	Frequency
Under 15 lbs	1/2 teaspoon	Once a day
15 to 35 lbs	1 teaspoon	Once a day
35 to 60 lbs	2 teaspoons	Once a day
60 lbs and up	1 tablespoon	Once a day

Other Safe Fresh Herbs for Dogs

- Peppermint (small amounts, also helps breath)
- Basil (anti-inflammatory)
- Dill (digestive support)

- Cilantro (mild detox support)
- Rosemary (small amounts only, not for dogs prone to seizures)

DO NOT GIVE: Chives, garlic, onions, leeks, or any allium family herbs. These are toxic to dogs even in small amounts.

GOOD TO KNOW: Bad breath that does not improve in 2 weeks may be a sign of dental disease or a gut issue. Time to see your vet.
