

Blueberries for Dogs

How many to give, how often, and which forms to avoid.

How Many to Give

Two or three times a week is the sweet spot. Daily is unnecessary and can upset some dogs' stomachs.

Your Dog's Weight	Per Serving	Per Week
Under 20 lbs	6 to 7 berries	2 to 3 times
20 to 50 lbs	1 tablespoon (8 to 10 berries)	2 to 3 times
50 to 80 lbs	2 tablespoons (15 to 20 berries)	2 to 3 times
80 lbs and up	3 tablespoons (about 25 berries)	2 to 3 times

Forms to Use and Forms to Avoid

SAFE FORMS

Fresh plain blueberries (rinsed)
 Frozen plain blueberries (great in summer)
 Mashed into food
 Plain unsweetened blueberry puree

ALWAYS AVOID

Dried blueberries (often sugar-coated)
 Blueberry muffins or baked goods
 Blueberry yogurt (sugar and dairy)
 Anything with xylitol (DEADLY to dogs)
 Blueberry flavored treats or syrups

3 Easy Ways to Serve

- Frozen treats: Pop frozen blueberries straight from the freezer as a refreshing summer snack.
- Food topper: Mash 5 to 10 fresh berries into their regular meal twice a week.
- Lick mat: Spread plain unsweetened yogurt on a lick mat, press a few berries in, and freeze.

FOR SMALL DOGS: Whole berries can be a choking hazard. Mash them or cut them in half for any dog under 15 lbs.

GOOD TO KNOW: Start with just 2 or 3 berries the first time to make sure your dog tolerates them. Some dogs get loose stools from too many at once.
